

TEXAS STATE BOARD REPORT

TEXAS STATE BOARD OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTANCY, AUSTIN, TEXAS

Enforcement Program Benefits Everyone

The Enforcement procedures and policies of the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy (TSBPA) have evolved over the past 95 years to an efficient program that protects not only the public, but the CPA as well. The Public Accountancy Act of 1915, which established a five-member Board to examine and certify accountants, also expressly forbade the Board from preventing “any person from being employed as an accountant in this State in either public or private practice....” Over the next 30 years, the Board, given no formal authority to make and enforce rules of professional conduct, did investigate claims of unprofessional conduct in order to protect the integrity of the certificates it granted. The first code of ethics for Texas CPAs was adopted in 1929 by the Texas Society of CPAs, but it was non-binding and sanctions were limited to expulsion from the Society.

As the state’s business and commerce grew in complexity, so did the demand for increasing education and experience requirements to establish a higher level of professionalism. The Public Accountancy Act of 1945 answered that demand by giving the Board statutory authority to make and enforce rules of professional conduct, strengthen education and experience requirements, limit public practice to those holding Board licenses, and allow non-certified public accountants to register on a one-time basis. After a required vote of license holders, a set of Rules of Professional Conduct went into effect on September 1, 1946. Amendments adopted in 1961 strengthened the Board’s position by granting subpoena powers and streamlining the procedures for pursuing cases of alleged unauthorized practice. As the caseload grew and the enforcement process became more formalized, Board members realized that they could no longer investigate charges and sit in judgment of their fellow CPAs, and they created committees to hear arguments, review case materials and make recommendations for action to the Board. Subsequently, advisory members were added to committees to ensure that the wider interests were represented.

Today, complaints are heard by one of three committees whose members are appointed by the Board’s presiding officer: Technical Standards Review (TSR) I and II, which hear cases alleging continued on p. 11 violations of technical standards, and the Behavioral Enforcement Committee (BEC), which hears cases involving allegations not related to attest services. These committees consider the complaints to determine if one or more of the Rules of Professional Conduct have been violated. The investigating committee can recommend dismissal of the case for insufficient evidence or voluntary compliance, request more information, invite the respondent to meet with them informally, or attempt to reach a resolution through an Agreed Consent Order (ACO). If no ACO is reached, the case may go to a judge in the State Office of Administrative Hearings, who will issue a recommendation that may be adopted or modified by the Board. Other enforcement actions that do not require committee scrutiny involve administrative infractions, such as a failure to pay fees or complete and report CPE.

As the number of licensed CPAs in Texas has steadily increased, and as the Board's resources and authority have increased, the percentage of enforcement cases has decreased. This somewhat surprising event can be attributed, according to Executive Director Bill Treacy, to increased education and understanding on the part of licensees acquired through mandatory peer review, continuing professional education, and ethics training. The figure on p. 1 supports this argument.

FAILURE TO COMPLETE LICENSE RENEWAL

The respondents listed below were found to be in violation of Section 501.80 (practice of public accountancy) and 501.93 (responses) of the Board's Rules, and were also found to be in violation of Sections 901.502(6) (violation of a rule of professional conduct) and 901.502(11) (conduct indicating a lack of fitness to serve the public as a professional accountant) of the Act. The certificate of each respondent who was not in compliance at the time of the Board meeting was revoked without prejudice until such time as the respondent complies with the licensing requirements of the Act.
